

Spring brings smiles to Busan, Korea's most family-friendly city

In May, the vibrant spirit of spring spreads across Busan, bringing smiles to residents as they embrace the season in one of Korea's most charming cities.

Recognized nationally for offering children the highest quality of life, Busan continues to stand out as a haven for families. Across the city, Deullak Nallak centers provide safe, engaging spaces where children can play freely and learn through exploration. A new program also invites young residents to become journalists, allowing them to report local stories and share their perspectives.

Busan offers various programs to support families. A seamless childcare system ensures children are safely looked after, giving busy parents peace of mind. Financial support for childcare and education expenses adds another layer of relief.

Known as "Family Month," May highlights what makes Busan special - a city where families thrive, and children grow in a nurturing, joyful environment.
